Training Policy Statement

C.T. Construction Ltd recognise it's legal duty under the Health and Safety at Work Etc Act 1974 to provide Information, Instruction, Training and Supervision to ensure the health, safety and welfare of all our employees.

To effect this the company sets out to identify the training needs of all our employees across a wide range of roles within the company that our employees undertake.

To assist in this we operate a training index(see attached) which lists a number of training courses our employees may need to attend in order to carry out their roles within the business.

Upon employment of new staff or operatives we use this index as a measure to establish what training needs a new employee may require and to identify what they may possess already, we further use this index to monitor the future training requirements of each employee in the company as part of our continued personal development plans.

The training we identify on the index is built around the knowledge within the company and what we know will be needed to successfully achieve the needs of the business, in addition to this we have undertaken contracts in the past and no doubt in the future where the contract requires specific areas of training to be given to ensure personnel involved can successfully meet the needs of the Client and the contract being undertaken. Training such as this, upon award of contract will always be carried out to fulfil our obligations under the contract and to meet the training policy of C.T.CONSTRUCTION LTD.
